

European citizens and corruption

A majority of Europeans consider corruption to be unacceptable

They believe that if you want to get something from public administration it is never acceptable to:

A majority of Europeans consider corruption to be widespread in their country

Most Europeans think that there is corruption in the national public institutions in their country (70%)

Only a quarter of Europeans say they are personally affected by corruption in their daily life

European citizens and corruption

Despite a slight improvement, Europeans remain sceptical about efforts to address corruption

More than four in ten Europeans DO NOT think that measures against corruption are applied impartially and without ulterior motives in their country

44% (-3 points since 2017)

More than half of Europeans DO NOT think that government efforts to combat corruption are effective

53% (-3 points since 2017)

Two thirds still THINK that high-level corruption cases are not pursued sufficiently

66% (-3 points since 2017)

There are still major obstacles to reporting corruption cases

5% of Europeans say they experienced or witnessed a case of corruption in the last 12 months...

...and only 21% of them reported it
(a 3-point increase since 2017)

Less than half of Europeans know where to report a case of corruption

Europeans believe that cases of corruption are not reported because:

